Is SchoolSafe Right for Your School?

Take a moment to assess your school's current preparedness. If you recognize three or more of these signs, SchoolSafe is the right step forward.

Staff & Policy Needs

- We have an emergency plan, but most staff aren't confident in how to use it.
- Emergency procedures vary by department or location and need consistency.
- We rely on just one or two people to manage emergency response.
- There's no clear training process for onboarding new staff on safety roles.
- Staff are unsure what their role is in an evacuation, lockdown, or medical incident.

Training & Readiness

- We've never run a tabletop exercise or staff-wide emergency drill.
- Past drills have been uncoordinated or caused confusion.
- We want to move beyond compliance to actual readiness.
- Our team would benefit from a calm, practical approach to crisis training.
- We've been unsure where to start or how to make training stick.

Culture & Communication

- Staff want clearer guidance on how to communicate during a crisis.
- We've never held an after-action review to evaluate our response.
- We want to build a culture of preparedness, not fear.
- We need support aligning our plans with FEMA guidance or ISO best practices.

If you checked 3 or more boxes, SchoolSafe will give your team:

- A clear, consistent emergency framework
- Greater confidence across your entire staff
- Actionable plans and drills you can build into your school year

Let's talk about bringing SchoolSafe to your school.
